1. Cut paper along dotted line.
2. Fold in half along shorter edge (while holding the paper in portrait mode, fold it in half horizontally backwards).
3. Fold it again in half (like closing a book) so that the title is on the front.

Oh, beautiful flower, the loneliest flower
No one sees your timid, curtained dance
Though a swan feathered trim and sun mirrored skin
You do not catch a strangers passing glance.

- justme

BEAUTIFUL FLOWER
by justme

Oh beautiful flower, the loneliest flower
No one sees your timid, curtained dance
Though a swan feathered trim and sun mirrored skin
You don't catch a stranger passing glance.

Oh dancing daisy, sweet little daisy
No one sees your sighing bending grace
Through a swallowed half shade stem, life guards, life's own gem
And grew it in this green and perfect place.

Oh midnight flower, the quiet flower
No one shines a light, or warms the ground.
Through closed petals, you do pray, but never would you say
For a better place for you, could never be found.

Oh sweet flower, sweet flowing flower
The bee he searches for your golden juice.
Through the masters own polished strings, and so many hidden things
Your the best that perfect ever could produce.

Oh silent flower, majestic flower
Your a giant in a world of tiny men
Through silence and subdue and by forever holding true
You are lesson to the noisy and insane.