

LIGHT & SHADOW

The measure to which a human who sees this world of opposites is the measure to which they are free.

*I*t is as a human being that you see the world of opposites and seeing them you have a choice, some choose to attach to this world and are therefore subject to, the results. The same results may lead to exhilaration and reflections of higher joy, but it will also lead to feelings that drag the attached to moments which mirror the opposite, sadness, loss and regret.

*H*umans through attachment set their standards according to their requirements and added baggage, they then search the world to attract their requirements from another, but since the other is subject to the highs and lows and ultimately because it is not truthful, it fails most of the time and any high will lead to the equivalent low.

*T*he measure to which a human who sees this world of opposites is the measure to which they are free.
